Abstract

This 2-day course is a mix between scientific evidence and hands-on training about the vertical geometry concept applied to full crown and laminate veneers restorations.

The clinical application of each clinical step will be presented in-depth as well the scientific foundation to achieve simple and successful rehabilitations from the single tooth to a full mouth.

The armamentarium (key point to the protocol), the restorative material features and selection will also be discussed.

During the hands-on part, the participants will experience how to design different tooth preparations and make and manage the temporary restorations.

They will also learn how to make a composite mock-up for laminates and to perform a tooth preparation for laminate veneers.

The final goal of this course is to improve the skills of clinicians who are seeking a simple and straightforward approach in prosthetic rehabilitations

Learning Objectives & Outcomes

- How the finish line geometry may affect the mechanical and biological response
- Common misconception about vertical geometry
- Clinical application of the Simplified Prosthetic Protocol (SPP) from tooth prep to final delivery
- Mechanical features of ceramic materials and their proper selection
- Esthetic rehabilitations through laminate veneers application
